SUICIDE OF NINE CHINESE GIRLS.—A recent China newspaper publishes the following account of an incident which is reported to have taken place at Whampoa: Nine young girls, living with different families in the village, seem to have entertained an aversion to married life. Seeing the misery and toil to which the members of the families with whom they lived were subjected and above all the slave-like obedience of wives to the wills of their husbands, the damsels in question came to the resolution of putting an end to their earthly careers, which is here carried into effect by a different modus operandi to that of opium-poisoning in vogue in Hong Kong. The nine damsels met by appointment on the bank of the river, at the entrance of one of the creeks in the vicinity of 'Brown's Ferry,' attired in heavy winter garments, which they had sewn all-together in order to prevent a separation. While thus united in body, heart and mind the damsels plunged into the deep. As this happened close to the time of the festival of the seven female gods, who descended from heaven and are called the 'seven sisters,' all sorts of superstitious conclusions are drawn from it.

'Do you know,' said M. Feli, 'why man is the most suffering of creatures? It is because he has one foot in the finite, the other in the infinite, and thus is torn asunder, not by four horses, as in the barbarous ages, but by two worlds.'

THE REMORSE OF A NIGHT.

The last night of the year was about to expire, the wind after a day of storm, had subsided into slumber; the white earth lay outspread, like a shrouded map, under the moon; and innumerable stars arose from the remotest abysses of heaven, twinkling as brightly as though they had but then begun their existence, and were never to suffer impairment. Eleven o'clock had tolled from the tower of an ancient Gothic church; and as the vibrations died away on the transparent air, an Old Man drew high to the window of a dark room in the desolate solitude of a village had long been the solitary tenant, and sat himself down at a table, and with his hand on his forehead, and his eyes on the floor, he began to weep.

He was unable to gaze any longer; he covered his face with his hands; and, as the blustering tears gushed from his eyes, he sank down, powerless and trembling, on his knees—and he cried out, as if his heart would break, 'O, come back, to me, lost days of my youth!—come back, come back to me once more!'

And the supplication of the penitent was not in vain, for they came back to him, those days of his youth—not yet lost, but starting from his bed—the blue moonbeams were shining in through the windows—the midnight chimes were announcing the beginning of a new year. 'Yes!—all had been but an appalling dream—all, except his sins and his transgressions;—these, alas! were too real, for conscience, even in sleep, is a fearful monitor. But he was still young—he had not grown old in iniquity—and with tears of repentance he thanked God for having, even by means of so terrible a vision, awakened in his heart a feeling of horror for the criminal career he had been pursuing, and for having revealed to him in that glimpse of a land full of sunbeams, harvests, and angelic spirits, the blissful goal in which, if he pleased, the path his existence might yet terminate.

Youthful reader! on which of these two paths art thou? On the right-hand path? Go forward, then with the blessings of thy Maker, and fear nothing! Go the left-hand path? If so, pause; be forewarned—turn while yet thou mayest—retreat; thy steps make a happier choice! I will pray that the terrors of this ghastly dream may not hereafter be arrayed in judgment against thee! Alas for thee, if the time ever come when thou shalt call aloud in thy despair, 'Come back, ye precious days of my youth!—unlike the dreamer, thou wilt be mocked by the barren echo of thine own lamentation—the precious days of youth will never, never come back to thee!—MANOAN.

But his cries were themselves fully up on the frozen air, for his father was no more, and his youth was no more—both had alike long ago vanished, never to reappear. He knew this, and he wept—yes, that miserable old man wept; but his tears relieved him not; they were like drops of hot iron, for they trickled from a burning brain.

He looked forth, and he saw flitting lights—will-o'-the-wisp—dancing over the morasses and becoming extinguished in the barial-grounds; and he said, 'Such were my riotous days of folly! He again looked forth, and he beheld a star fall from Heaven to earth, and there melt away in blackness that left no trace behind, and he said, 'I saw that star!—and with that woe-ful thought were torn open anew the leprous wounds in his bosom which the serpents that clung around him would never suffer to be healed.

His morbid imagination, wandering abroad till it touched on the confines of frenzy, showed him figures of sleep-walkers traversing like shadows the nooks of the house—the shutters widened into furnaces vomiting forth flames and monsters—the windmills lifted up their giant arms, and threatened to crush him—and a forgotten spectre, left behind in a deserted chamber, glared on him with a horrible expression of malignity, and then mocked his terror by assuming his features.

On a sudden there flowed out upon the air a deep, rich, and solemn stream of music. It came from the steeple of the old Gothic church, as the bells announced the birth of the new year, for it was now the twelfth hour. Its cadences fell with a thrilling distinctness upon the ear and the heart of the Old Man; and every tone in the melody, through the agency of that mysterious power which sound possesses of re-animating within the forsaken halls of the soul images long departed, brought before his mind some past scene of his life, vivid as a panoramic picture. Again he looked round upon the lucid horizon, and over the frosty earth; and he thought on the opportunities he had forfeited—the warnings he had slighted—the examples he had scoffed at.

He thought upon the friends of his youth, and how they, better and more fortunate than he, were now good men, at peace with themselves—teachers of wisdom to others, fathers of blessed families, torch-bearers for the world—and he exclaimed, 'Oh! and I also, had I but willed it, I also might, like them, have seen with tearless eyes, with tranquil heart, this night depart into eternity! Oh, my dear father—my dear, dear mother! I even I, might have been now happy. Had I but hearkened to your affectionate admonitions—had I but

GETTING SOBER.

We heard a gentleman remark the other day, in commenting on the recent elections, that the majority of the American people had been on a big Radical drunk for a long time, and that they were now just beginning to get sober. This is an original and a truthful way to put it. The American people certainly have been drunk not with whiskey but with something worse.

They have been drunk with hate, with passion, with ambition, with speculation, with corruption, with desire to accumulate sudden wealth—at the sacrifice of reputation and honor.

Drunk with these passions and drunken with these passions, they have made their laws and drunken judges administered them. Preachers, drunk with sectional hate, preached and drunken congregations listened and applauded.

A drunken Senator vomited in the White House and drunken sycophants wallowed in the vomit and called him great.

Drunk Senators staggered into their seats in the Senate chamber, while their drunken prostitutes smiled at them from the galleries.

Nero, drunk, bidding and revelling in the palace at Rome, wasn't a comparison to this American Radical drunk.

In the frenzy of their drunkenness they waged war on the defenceless South, and sent down a gang of drunken adventurers and ruffians to rob and oppress her.

And they did rob and oppress her, foisted corrupt sons from the drunken rabble into her legislative halls, into her judicial places, into her gubernatorial chairs, and above all the sober intelligence of those who would not get drunk with them.

They rioted on the plunder they captured and hid a jolly time while the spree lasted.

But this big drunk had to be paid for as sober people said, it would. It couldn't last always. And after the excitement of the big drunk was over, and the bills came in, they began to think somebody had played pretty big fool and paid pretty heavily for it.

And then the work of sobering begins, with empty pockets, weak stomachs, troubled brains, and a solemn resolve on reformation.

Let us hope it will be in earnest, and that we have seen the end of this big Radical drunk.—Greensboro Patriot.

A JUROR EXCITED.—Recently a juror approached the clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court and stated that it would be impossible for him to serve.

'Why not?' inquired the clerk. 'Because I'm deaf,' responded the juror. The clerk had reason for incredulity, and so informed the deaf man in a whisper that he would report his case to the Judge.

Turning to his honor he said: 'Mr. Badman of Manchester desires to be excused.' 'What are his reasons?' asked his honor, without raising his eyes from the paper he was reading.

'He says he is deaf,' replied the clerk. 'He is excused,' said the Judge quickly; 'if he is deaf we don't want him; if he is a liar, we don't want him.'

Mr. Badman is at home now.

CATCHING A TARTAR.—So you don't care about donkey-riding, missy. And why? 'O, I've got a pony, and one doesn't care about donkeys after that, you know.' 'Has a pony got more legs than a donkey, then?' 'Missy (who doesn't like to be chaffed) 'Yes; exactly twice as many as some donkeys that I know of.'

Little Joe and the Little Lion.—'But did I tell you what a time I had with my little Joe?' 'No! what was it?' 'Why, I was showing him the picture of the martyrs thrown to the lions, and was talking very solemnly to him, trying to make him feel what a terrible thing it was. "Ma," said he all at once, "Oh ma! just look that poor little lion way behind there, it won't get any!"'

'Mamma,' cried a little girl, in terror to her mother, 'little Mattie has swallowed a button.' 'Her mother, seeing her terror calmly replied: 'Well, what good will that do her?' 'Said the little child seriously, 'Not any good as I see, unless she swallows a button hole!'

'Were you guarded in your conduct while in New York?' asked a father of his son, who had just returned from a visit to that city. 'Yes, sir; part of the time by two policemen.'

MAHRIA.

It is the happiest and most virtuous state of society, in which the husband and wife set out early together, make their path of duty and duty, with perfect system, plans calculations and desires, with reference to their present means, and in their future and common interest. Nothing delights me more than to enter the new little tenement of the young couple, who within perhaps, two or three years, will outgrow their present means, and in their future and common interest. Nothing delights me more than to enter the new little tenement of the young couple, who within perhaps, two or three years, will outgrow their present means, and in their future and common interest.

The industrious wife is cheerfully employing her own hands in domestic duties, putting her house in order, or mending her husband's clothes, or preparing the dinner, whilst, perhaps, the little darling sits prattling upon the floor or in the cradle—and everything seems preparing to welcome the happiest of husbands and the best of fathers, when he shall come from his toils to enjoy the sweet of his little paradise.

This is true domestic pleasure—the only bliss that survives the fall. Health, contentment, love, abundance and bright prospects, are all here. But it has become a prevalent sentiment that a man must acquire his fortune before he marries—that the wife must have no sympathy, no share with him in the pursuit of it, in which most of the pleasure truly consists; and the young married people must set out with no large and expensive an establishment as becoming those who have been wedded for twenty years. This is very unhappy.

It fills the community with bachelors, who are waiting to make their fortune, endangering virtue and promoting vice; it destroys the true economy and design of the domestic institution, and it promotes idleness and inefficiency among females, who are expecting to be taken up by a fortune, and passively sustained without any care or concern on their part; and thus may a wife become 'not a help-mate, but a help-eat.'—Winifred.

CRIMINAL LAW IN JAPAN.
The best evidence seen of progress in Japan is the amended criminal code. 'Until recently a barbarous code, made one hundred and fifty years ago, has been the criminal law of the land. For kidnapping children, the old penalty was decapitation and exposure on the scaffold; the new law, penal servitude for ten years. Stealing was formerly punished, if the property stolen was of greater value than ten yen, by death; the reverse; penalty now is imprisonment for life. It was death under the old law to receive stolen property; the extreme penalty now is ten years' imprisonment. Selling human beings into bondage was punished by death. Under the old law there was a variety of crimes punished by decapitation, crucifixion and other forms of death, for which strangling has been substituted in all cases in which human life is sacrificed. The ancient code punished all forms of adultery with death, but it is now punished with penal servitude one year for ordinary cases, and a longer term for aggravated cases. Incendiarism was formerly punished with strangling, and is still punished with death, but without the cruelty of the old form. Ambler were formerly banished, but are now imprisoned for only eighty days.

IS THIS THE HEROIC AGE?—That noble lives are lived by quite ordinary people, who say nothing about it, is once in a while proved by the noble deaths that suggest the story of the unheard of years preceding them. Such a life must have been that of James Marr, who recently, near the Australian coast, was washed overboard by a heavy sea, which at the same time carried away the mainmast of the schooner. Marr clung to the mast until he saw, with the quick eyes of an old seaman, that it hampered the vessel; then simply enough, and silently began up his own chance of life for his 'centred' sake. He motioned them to cut the mast adrift; they took him good by, and he nodded for answer as he quietly sank back in the waves.

A Sunday school teacher was explaining the omnipresence of the Deity to his scholars, and ended by telling them that He was everywhere. Where upon a red-headed boy asked: 'Is He in my pocket?' 'The teacher replied that the question was rather profane but he would answer 'Yes, He was everywhere.' 'I've got you there, said the boy: 'I a't got no pocket.'

They have some very smart business men in New Jersey. Last week a young man was struck by lightning in a field near Trenton, and when the people began to flock to the spot to look at the victim, they found a man standing by the corpse trying to sell lightning rods to the crowd.

THE LEGISLATURE.

This body assembled in Raleigh on Monday morning, a quorum being present. The Governor's Message was read, and referred. At the present writing we have no information of interest to communicate.

THE INJUNCTION.

The financial circles of the State have been aroused by a bold stroke made by the holders of the special tax bonds to obtain recognition of their validity through the U. S. Courts, by the instrumentality of Judge Bond. This functionary granted an injunction on the application of a man named Self, which was served on the public Treasurer, restraining him from paying out certain monies in hand, being an amount sufficient to cover the sum collected as interest on bonds issued in favor of certain Rail Roads, which bonds come under the general name of special tax bonds.

These sums had been paid into the Treasury under the existing laws recognizing the validity of the bonds or before there was a question before the Courts as to their validity.

At the session of 1871, the Treasurer of the State, under authority of the Legislature, appropriated these sums to the general purposes of the government.

We shall see whether the Legislature is going to be driven into measures, and whether it will submit its own fixed convictions to the dictation of outside control. Of one thing, the Legislature may be assured, and that is the support of the people and the aid of the best legal talent in the State. There is no one thing upon which public opinion is more unalterably made up, than upon a resistance to the payment of these inequitable obligations.

COL. HUMPHREY'S SCHEME.

The Goldboro Messenger says that he has seen the draft of a bill to be presented by Col. J. W. Humphrey, Senator from Wayne, having in view the settlement of the Debt of the State. As the Bill will soon be submitted to the Legislature, it will be inexpedient to review in detail an imperfect abstract. We will say this much however, and that is, that we approve a leading idea in the proposed bill, the utter ignoring of the illegal obligations resting upon the State, and which should be the leading principle in every proposition to settle the Debt of the State. Justice to honest creditors to the extent of the ability of the State, and a total disregard to all false claims, however worded or presented.

Even the just, recognized debt, must become the subject of compromise, for it cannot be claimed that the State is able to pay the whole amount, even of these. How hopeless then to regard the payment of dishonestly imposed obligations, as within the bounds of possibility.

So far as we see, the scheme of Col. Humphrey's is practicable and practical.

A WARLIKE LOOKOUT.

Within the last week a new cloud has risen above the horizon which may at any time burst in War, and involve this country with a foreign foe. The affair of the Virginia has become more serious, and as each additional item of horror is added to the dismal story, a more widespread sentiment of indignation develops, demanding vengeance and punishment for such barbarities.

With the question of international law, even if we felt competent to discuss it, we will have nothing to do, simply because there is much to be developed, which may materially affect the issue. But upon the main facts, the one upon which the public attention is now fixed, every one may speak. Every one will find an utterance for that universal voice of nature which cries out in horror at this cruel outrage upon her sensibilities. The wholesale, prompt and vindictive slaughter of sixty five men, without inquiry into acts or motives, will not only find no defenders, but will unite a general purpose of punishment upon the barbarous executioners.

Whatever may have been the original intentions of the Spanish Home government in its dealings with the prisoners, is not known. Certain it is, that it intended and ordered delay. These orders were either disregarded, and treated with contempt, or they were not received in time to prevent the catastrophe. If the first, the Spanish Government owes it to the civilized world to bring its recalcitrant subordinates to prompt and condign punishment. If it does not do that, it becomes particeps criminis, an approver of the act, an enemy to the human race, and those powers who are really civilized owe a duty to humanity to inflict such punishment as will be a guarantee against the repetition of such monstrous barbarities.

What the course of the American Government may be, is not known beyond the increase of the squadron in the Cuban waters. That may or may not mean war. One thing is certain, and that is, the government would have the hearty endorsement of the whole nation. It is a quarrel not of its seeking; one not waged, or at least not begun, for conquest, but one taken up for the cause of a general and an outraged humanity, and one therefore which will bring to its standard the joint support of the North and the South, the East and the West.

CAUSES AND CONSEQUENCES.

Mr. T. T. Brooks, late President of the Merchants National Bank of Petersburg was arrested on the morning of the 13th inst., on a warrant issued by the U. S. Commissioner, charged with embezzling from that institution the sum of one hundred thousand dollars.

Among the various causes which have combined to produce the present troubles, is this one of the dishonesty of bank officers. From the wide spread character of the evil, it appears that the checks devised to restrain it, are worthless, and from the magnitude of the temptation, and the easy escape from punishment, the tendency to repetition and imitation is increased. There has not been among the scores of cases, a single instance of adequate punishment, and while moral sentiment is so low, and the power of money, as an instrument of corruption so great, there is no encouragement to expect improvement.

It may truly be said that the nice distinctions between right and wrong, were never more completely obliterated than now, and that there never was a time in human history, when villainy met with so ready applause, and when it found so friendly a shield in the venality of juries, or so safe a refuge in the depravity of public opinion.

It may be, there will in time come a turn in the tide; when man will be roused to some sense of shame, and learn again to reverence the old fashioned name of honesty; when they will again be content with honest gains, and learn to value that which is the fruit of patient accumulation. And surely, if the examples of the evaporation of the colossal fortunes of those so lately dominant in the financial history of the country; of those before whom the wealth of Cresses paled into insignificant competence; of those whose fortunes at length vanished like a dream; of those whose fortunes grew up to their enormous magnitude, the combined result of fraud violence and rapacity; of those whose sudden downfall from their elevation of control,—will be taken as a warning against the vanity of riches, and the urge of ill gotten gains, then the days of modesty, honesty and moderation may return.

THE FAIR OF THE CAROLINAS.

On Tuesday next this exhibition will be opened with a splendor which will approach, if it does not surpass, that of the State Fair. Our Charlotte friends, with their usual vim are doing everything to make it successful. An interest has been aroused which not only pervades our own State, but extends into South Carolina. In fact, as the name imports, it embraces the case State as much as the other.

There is a judgment, united with zeal, which promises to make this Fair one of the most useful ever held in the State, and if it should fall short of expectation, it will be the result of causes beyond the control of the managers.

We hope many of our citizens will be induced to go up, as we can assure them of a pleasant time, and the Rail Road will extend all necessary facilities.

COTTON MARKET.

No change to note in last week's operations, and no indications of improving tendency. The New York market at the close of the week was weak with sales on Saturday of 958 bales at 15 1/2 to 15 3/4.

Norfolk market somewhat firm. Low middlings 13 1/2. Raleigh 13. Wilmington 12 1/2 to 13.

Gold 109, 109 1/2.

It is said that the small pox prevails dreadfully at Rio, and the Coffee trade is at a stand still. An immense accumulation of coffee has taken place, the immediate consequence of which will be high prices here, with subsequent heavy decline.

Samuel Adams, organist of a Methodist Church in Brooklyn dropped dead while playing during the services.

Seven hundred men have been put to work on the Iron-clads, Ajax and Manhattan at Philadelphia in preparation for Cuban emergencies.

Official confirmation has been received at Washington of the execution of 57 men of the crew of the Virginia, among whom were 17 British subjects. The British Legation has received the same information.

TOBACCO MARKET.

There was only a moderate demand for Virginia tobacco last week, and the sales that came to our notice were chiefly for shipment, manufacturers craving little or no disposition to operate beyond the satisfaction of current wants.

Throughout the various departments of the trade, indeed, there appeared to have been a notable degree of apathy all round, neither sellers nor buyers daring to do more than was absolutely necessary to prevent stagnation.

The general market continues to exhibit the same outward look of strength that has all along characterized it since the commencement of our late peculiar experience, but the indications of heaviness and uncertainty everywhere else are observable here in the diminished sales and absence of bustling movement usually noticeable in the closing month of autumn. But, withal, the wonder is not that so little is done, but that so much can be done when every thing seems to be up-side down, and all the great industrial interests of the country are in a state of demoralization. We are not enjoying a spirited demand for our various tobacco staples, nor even a profitable one, but we are having what some other large industries at this time have not, and that is a steady trade in each and all of them, and this, without experiencing, as yet, to an appreciable extent, the inconvenience resulting from declining values. This can be said of hardly any other great interest.—Tobacco Leaf Nov. 12th.

The leading English papers think that the Virginia atrocity has definitely fixed the destiny of Cuba. It must now inevitably fall into the hands of the United States, and foreign powers, instead of opposing it, as they would have done in times gone by, will now applaud the act, because they see the need of it in the interests of humanity.

There is great activity in the Navy Yards, and it is shown that the Navy is in better condition than was supposed. The National Republican compliments Secretary Robinson for his quiet efficiency, and gives a list of vessels ready for sea at a days notice.

A number of vessels have been ordered to join the South Atlantic Squadron, to rendezvous at Havana; among them, the Franklin, Worcester, Kansas, Osage, and Yantic. Large stores of coal are collected at Key West.

President Castelar has had a high reputation, not only as a scholar and Orator, but as a gentleman. It is announced that he is on intimate terms with Sicles. His reputation is at stake. Who imposed Dan upon the unsophisticated and unsuspecting foreigner?

A large meeting of the working people was held in Philadelphia on Monday. It was shown that there were 40,000 workmen out of employ.

Yellow fever still lingers in Memphis, and scarcely a day passes without a death. They are old cases, however, and the business of the city is resumed, and the wanderers have all returned.

Credit should have been given last week to the New York Tobacco Leaf to the Market News headed "Tobacco." It was intended, but omitted by the compositor. Wheat seedling is abruptly closed. Those who have been unwise enough to delay, or who have been unfortunately compelled to do so, must now forego the operation altogether, at least with any prospect of advantage.

The crowd in town on Saturday had a cheery look, and the pleasant faces seen on the streets seemed at war with all ideas of panic and depression. Yet there is no doubt that money is more than unusually scarce here as elsewhere, though business is brisker than could be expected.

Known Storm.

The thunder storm of Sunday night which was accompanied with much rain, was followed on Monday by a furious snow storm which began at 2 o'clock p. m. and continued until after dark. We do not remember even in the depths of winter to have seen the snow fall more heavily, and if the ground had been in condition, the accumulation would have been very considerable. As it is the unusual sight is presented in November of the ground robed in white, and the evergreens bowed down with their fleecy burden.

Accident to Maj. J. W. Graham.

On Saturday afternoon while Maj. Graham was walking through his unfinished residence, in passing over the first floor, he stepped upon an unfastened plank which gave way and precipitated him to the cellar below. The fall was about eleven feet, and the flooring of brick, and of course the concussion was a severe one. One of his ankles is sprained, and he received severe contusions and bruises which up to the present time have confined him to the bed. It is believed that the injuries are by means serious, though accompanied with much suffering.

Christianity Advocate.

This valuable journal makes its appearance in an entirely new dress. There is no paper among our exchanges which we welcome with more pleasure, because, however we may disagree upon strictly sectarian ideas, there is such a high toned catholic sentiment in all its utterances, and so much intellectual ability, and at the same time such a lively appreciation of secular affairs, as places the Advocate in the front rank of journals in the State.

Distinction.

We noticed with much pleasure among the names of those who achieved high honors at the Bingham School, the name of our young countryman Robert Strudwick.

A Fine Opportunity.

If the times were more propitious, we would call attention to the fine mill site just on the edge of the corporate limits, owned by Dr. P. Jones, and which is a tempting opportunity for capitalists. It is on Long River, at the foot of one of the main streets, and is one of the best water powers on this part of the river. Seventy years ago it was known as Mallett's mill, but since that time it has been disused, yet without lowering a particle of its original value. For a cotton mill site it is unequalled, and since Orange is becoming a cotton County, and since a factory would be within three hundred yards of the station, the facilities for manufacturing will be nearly as great as those enjoyed by the Granite Mills on Haw River, which are great in fact, except in volume of water.

Staatsville Intelligence.

Mr. F. H. Pendleton has become associated with Mr. C. R. Jones in the publication of the Staatsville Intelligence. This Journal is already a most excellent, well edited, and useful paper.

Styven's Bitters.

We believe there is a general and reasonable belief that the advertised bitters are generally humbugs. We think an exception may be made in favor of Styven's Peruvian Bitters, for Chills, Dyspepsia, Debility, &c. They are well known in Danville, where they originated, and have the voluntary endorsement of the whole medical faculty.

We are induced to call attention to them from their happy effect upon the wife of our foreman in a recent case of illness.

For sale by Dr. O. Hooker.

Babus Morgan, the well known photographic artist, has recently married a daughter of the Hon. W. J. Clarke.

We have received the circular of the above Institution, which goes into operation on the second Monday in January 1875. It is a Classical, Mathematical, Scientific and Military Academy, with the following corps of officers:
J. H. Horner, A. M., Instructor in Ancient Languages, Mathematics, and English branches.
H. H. Graves, A. M., Mathematics Natural Sciences, and English branches.
Maj. D. H. Hamilton, Mathematics, French and English branches.
A. W. Venable Jr. (from Poughkeepsie Commercial College), Penmanship and Book-keeping.
An Instructor of Ancient Languages, German and English branches is yet to be appointed.
The establishment of the School here is therefore beyond peradventure, and the character of the gentlemen who compose its faculty secure its success beyond a doubt.

In the whole course of our observation we do not remember an enterprise of the kind engaged in under such happy auspices. We know nowhere gentlemen more competent to undertake the guidance of youth, whether from intellectual and educational endowments, high moral worth, or fine social position, and we know no place that could have been selected which combines the advantages of health, accessibility and economy, together with the character of a cultivated society and the simplest religious privileges.
The removal of the School from Oxford, where it had attained a high reputation, to Hillsboro, the Principals will greatly enlarge their means of usefulness, and add materially to the character of their institution. The corps is enlarged by the addition of gentlemen of competence in their departments, and the curriculum has been much expanded.

The military feature, adopted from that of Col. Ten is a decided gain, in adding not only to the physical powers of the pupils, but also as a powerful promoter of system and discipline, while at the same time, it will not be permitted to interfere with the scholastic duties of the school.
It is not to be doubted that the people of the State and of the South will appreciate these advantages, and more than sustain the patronage extended to the School at Oxford.

The people of Hillsboro are to be congratulated upon such an accession—an accession which will be felt in many ways, and principally in the restoration of that beacon light which made our town once the focus of intellectual brightness. It will be felt also in the vivifying of many small streams of prosperity, by which the whole surrounding population, as well as that of the town, will be benefited.

We suppose the details of the circular will be communicated through our columns hereafter.

The Monetary Crisis.

I have just received a large Stock of Goods bought at Panic prices, which will be sold lower than you can buy elsewhere. Would call your attention, especially to my Stock of Boots and Shoes, also to goods for Men and Boys wear. A good assortment of the best Prints, and Waxed Goods, Shawls &c. &c.

Don't be induced to buy until you see my goods and prices, and you'll find that this is the place to buy cheap. Thankful for past favors.

Correspondence of the Recorder.

Nov. 7th, 1874.

MY DEAR SIR: In your paper of Oct. 29th I noticed an article from the able pen of Gen. Clingman, giving a history of the part taken by the 8th N. C. Regiment at the battle of Manassas. The same article was published in "Our Living and Our Dead," but I only heard it read, and sent a reply correcting some errors, which I will point out, and request you to publish the same. As I have the letter from Gen. Clingman before me now, and upon reading it carefully I find I have nothing to retract in my reply to its first publication.

I would not notice the letter through the public prints, if it was not to do justice to a gallant officer, and relieve him from the unpleasant position in which he is placed by Gen. Clingman. I have reference to Lt. Col. Lightfoot, a citizen of Orange, and residing at Hillsboro at the commencement of the war, I do not wish to pluck a single laurel from the brow of the gallant Fisher, for I yield to no man in admiration of his bravery, and love and affection for his noble qualities.

I yield to Gen. Clingman that everything he states with two or three exceptions was correct, even to the position and handling of the enemy's guns, and the conversation of Capt. Ricketts, for he repeated the same to myself after he was a prisoner, and had he failed to mention Col. Lightfoot's name as he failed to mention that of your humble servant I should not have noticed it at all.

Orange furnished two companies for the 8th Regiment, and those two companies were in the action at Manassas, and I claim first that it was an Orange County Company commanded by Capt. Frederick of Durham; and secondly, that Capt. Ricketts' Battery, and that it at Manassas. Secondly, that Lt. Col. Lightfoot, and Major Webb, two field officers of the 8th were in the action from the time the Regiment went in until the enemy were driven across Bull Run.

Thirdly, I claim that the regiment after capturing the enemy's guns, being huddled up without any foundation, were forced to retire by the heavy fire of the enemy in front, and Col. Lightfoot on the crest of the hill gave the order to fall back, and that Lt. Col. Lightfoot, and myself rallied about two hundred men, forward on the right of Kirby Smith, and upon the field that night.

In this I am correct, Col. Lightfoot sent me the next morning with Lieut. Evans Turner of Hillsboro and a small detail to go back, and look after our dead and wounded. Col. Lightfoot could not be prevailed on to make an official report of the action to the State.

I feel grateful to Gen. C. for the high compliment he pays the 8th Regt. I have always contended, (and did so a few days after the battle to Col. Wilcox who commanded the enemy's Infantry, and who was wounded, and captured with Capt. Ricketts) that our Regt. the 6th, had turned the tide of battle and saved the day. As regards Col. Lightfoot's criticism on Col. Fisher's movements, I have nothing to say; he never gave that as a reason for not making an official report. I will mention again that Col. Lightfoot was not only in the action but was wounded.

Tobacco Market.

We are sorry we are unable to give our tobacco planters any consolatory information about this staple. Everything is still at a dead lock, and there is no movement in any market. Richmond must be the first to move, and Richmond still stands still.

The Equivocal of the 16th says: "We can give no regular quotations, as none such, in the present state of the market exist." Such being the case in Richmond, Danville must wait, and while Danville waits, so must most of the planters, because the smaller markets cannot venture to resume a business which the larger ones hesitate to take hold of. An attempt is made in Milton to open the market in the back of latter, which is highly commendable, as subserving a great public convenience; still the effects of that operation are local and limited.

We will be prompt to give the earliest information, and to sound the first cheering notes of encouragement to our friends. See remarks of N. Y. Tobacco Leaf in another column.

STATE ITEMS.

The Sentinel says there is not a dollar in the State Treasury, and but six out of the ninety five Sheriffs have settled.

News says a young man by the name of Emory, living in the North-western part of Wake, while returning from a day shooting, was shot by a companion, and desperately wounded, the whole charge passing through his body. "Didn't know it was loaded, you know."

News: The Secretary of the Agricultural Society has already paid out $4,000 in premiums awarded at the State Fair, and there is yet about $1,200 due on the list, which is in the hands of the Treasurer, and will be paid out on application.

Sentinel: Mrs. Lucy Wall died at Mr. A. T. Mills from taking strychnine by mistake for quinine. The poison was taken from a crack in the logs in the kitchen; a strange medicine chest.

Will Star: The store house of Col. W. C. Smith near New Forestville Anson Co. was recently destroyed by fire, together with 22,000 pounds seed cotton, flour, bacon, &c. The fire was accidental. Last year Col. S. lost valuable mills, tannery &c, entailing a loss of $15,000.

Col. Ham Jones of Charlotte, and Senator from Mecklenburg, was recently united in marriage to Miss Connie, daughter of W. R. Myers of Charlotte. And Mr. Kerr Craig, Member of the House from Rowan has just married Miss Josephine Branch, daughter of the late Genl. L. O. B. Branch of Raleigh. Happy felicitations.

Salisbury Watchman: An Indian burying ground has been found near the Trading ford. One of the skeletons measured 6 ft. 7 inches from crown to heel. Out of sixteen skulls examined, there was not a decayed tooth found. Stone hatchets knives &c were found.

Mr. Samuel Reeves one of the best citizens of Rowan is dead. He was about 72 years of age.

On Sunday 2,600 bales of cotton passed through Charlotte on the Piedmont Air Line. It was shipped from Memphis direct to Liverpool via Norfolk.

News: The cotton gin of Mr. M. A. Bledsoe, about a mile and a half from Raleigh, was burnt on Sunday evening, no doubt the work of an incendiary. One of the presses was entirely new, and the loss is estimated at between $3,500, and $5,000.

The Southern Home has received a letter from John B. Wyatt, the father of Henry Wyatt the first martyr to the Confederate cause, and the only man killed at Bethel, written from the Pitt County Poor House! Will the people of North Carolina suffer that?

The Rev Dr. Wheat, formerly a Professor at Chapel Hill, but of late years a resident of Tennessee, recently took charge of St Barnabas Church at Greensboro. He has just resigned that charge, and returns to Tennessee again.

That Favorite Home Remedy.

PAIN-KILLER.

Has been before the public for thirty years, and has proved a safer and better reputation than any other proprietary medicine of the present day. At this period there are but few medicines which the merits of the Pain-Killer rival, while some exist it is a salient, they know and in its power in curing pain when taken internally while others it internally with great success, but are equally ignorant of the healing virtues when applied externally. We therefore wish to say, that it is equally successful whether used internally or externally. It is a sufficient evidence of its virtues as a standard medicine to know that it is now used in all parts of the world, and that its sale is constantly increasing. No curative agent has had such a wide spread sale or given such universal satisfaction.

Pain-Killer is a purely vegetable compound, prepared from the best and purest ingredients, and is entirely free from the most potent and deadly poisons which are found in many of the so-called "Pain-Killers" which are sold in the market. It is a perfectly safe medicine, even in the most unskilful hands.

As a remedy for Rheumatism, and by being kept ready for immediate resort, will save many an hour of suffering and many a dollar in time and doctor's bills.
